GROUP AGREEMENT & CONSENT FOR SERVICES

GROUPS AT THERAPY AND MINDFULNESS PRACTICES

- Monthly Mindfulness Workshops
- Psycho-educational groups
- Group Psychotherapy

RISKS AND BENEFITS OF GROUP THERAPY

Like individual therapy, group therapy has its risks and benefits. Group therapy is meant to be a safe place to share experiences with peers struggling with similar issues. Group therapy has been shown to have benefits for individuals who undertake it. Group therapy can be a place for members to find accountability, support and see that they are not alone. Group therapy can be a great supplement to individual therapy and many participants report feeling better faster, than with traditional individual therapy alone. Group therapy can lead to a remarkable reduction in feelings of distress, increased fulfillment in personal relationships, increased self-awareness, and improved distress tolerance. There are no guarantees about what will happen, for this reason I am not able to grant refunds for therapy sessions.

There are risks to group therapy. Participating in group therapy may be uncomfortable, including remembering or discussing unpleasant events. The group therapy process can sometimes evoke strong feelings of anxiety, frustration and sadness. At first, members often feel vulnerable while sharing feelings with other group members. There is always the possibility of disagreements among group members. Group dynamics are also constantly changing and other members may bring up topics that can be emotionally triggering. Due to the varying nature and severity of the issues and individuality of each client, I am unable to foresee or guarantee a specific result.

Although group members are screened before joining the group, as a facilitator I am unable to predict with any certainty how others will behave in the group setting. Group members are encouraged to keep other participants' information confidential and respect the privacy of all group members, however confidentiality cannot be guaranteed.

GROUP PROCEDURES

Psycho-educational and Psychotherapy groups will meet once a week for 45 minutes at a time that we agree on. Psycho-educational groups are time limited with a set number of sessions and focused on a specific topic (ie- anxiety, time management). Psychotherapy groups are open and ongoing, meaning new members are allowed to join after completing a screening intake with the group facilitator. Seats are limited to 7 per group. Groups will have planned breaks that may correlate with school breaks or holidays.

GROUP EXPECTATIONS

Group is meant to be a safe place for participants. What happens in group stays in group. Members are expected to keep anything said by other members during group confidential. This is not meant to encourage secret keeping, but rather to protect everyone's privacy and ensure that group is a safe place to share feelings. Members are expected to treat one another with respect. Most topics are fair game for discussion, however if the group facilitator deems a certain subject inappropriate or too sensitive for certain group members, the facilitator will moderate the discussion. Please see discipline management procedures for more information about group expectations.

UNEXPECTED ABSENCE

My schedule is such that I may need to take leave for personal reasons. If this is the case, I will notify you as soon as possible if I am unable to keep our scheduled time. Should I become ill or incapacitated, I do have an Emergency Response Team (ERT) in place to handle any issues that may come up with my clients. My ERT will only have access to my files in an emergency situation.
